

SEMESTER ASSESSMENT INFORMATION

HIGH SCHOOL

Purpose of Semester Assessments

The purpose of semester assessments is to give students the opportunity to demonstrate their learning from the first 18 weeks of school. Assessments are cumulative in nature, and they cover the critical concepts and skills that students have learned and practiced so far this year. In many cases, the assessment takes the form of a pen-and-paper exam. In other cases, a project, presentation, or other form of assessment is a more appropriate way to allow students to demonstrate learning.

Schedule and Timing of Semester Assessments

We block off the week of January 25-28 for semester assessments. Each day, there are two assessment periods, each lasting one hour and 45 minutes. This allows students to complete their assessments in plenty of time, without feeling rushed. The first assessment period goes from 7:55-9:40am, and the second assessment period goes from 10:00-11:45am. Please see the schedule at the end of this email for which assessments happen on which days. This year, to avoid unnecessary transitions and sharing of spaces, these assessment days will be half-days. Students will dismiss and should be picked up from school at 11:45 each day. There will be no lunch or student supervision offered during the afternoons.

Attendance for Semester Assessments

Students are expected to be present for semester assessments. Vacations, appointments, and other activities that would prevent a student from attending school should not be scheduled during the week of January 25-28. Attendance will be taken, and regular attendance procedures will apply. Students who are in Study Hall, Teacher/Office Aide, SAT Prep, or Math Lab classes should not attend during those sessions. If a student in one of those classes needs to be on campus, we will have a designated classroom space for them to use.

Semester Assessments for Remote Learners

A second email has been sent with specific information for remote learners about semester assessments. Please see that email for more details.

Preparing for Assessments

We have three weeks of school in January prior to semester assessments. Teachers will not introduce new material after January 19th. They will also not be giving tests or quizzes during the week of January 18th-21st. This will allow time leading up to the exam for teachers to help students review and prepare for their assessments. We encourage students to be as proactive as possible leading up to semester assessments. They can do so by:

- Asking questions and ensuring they have clarity about content and skills for the assessments
- Spending extra time with teachers as needed. We will continue offering our Friday office hours opportunities for students. From 8:00-9:00am, remote learning students may come to campus for individual support from teachers. From 9:00-11:00am, all students may join their teachers for virtual office hours.
- Spreading preparation out over multiple days. We know that cramming the night before an exam, or saving all of the work on a project until the last minute, leads to stress and sub-standard work. We encourage students to use the weeks before semester assessments to begin preparing.

Cell Phone and Device Use

Cell phone use is strictly prohibited during semester assessments. Students should not be using phones to call or text during any of the assessment periods. Phone calls may be made only during breaks and after assessment periods are over. Students may only use their school laptops if directed to by the teacher for the purposes of their semester assessment. Students should not bring any other electronic devices to school during exam week.

When an Assessment Ends

Students will remain quietly in their assigned classroom for the duration of the assessment periods. They should come to school prepared with reading and study materials in case they complete an assessment early.
